BJU REVIEW

Winter 1996

From the Refrigerator Door

The University Chorale, directed by Dr. Warren Cook, was one of eight choirs invited to perform at the 1996 World Choral Festival in Seoul, Korea in August. The Chorale was the only non-professional choir invited to the festival.

'81 grad and BJ Press elementary author Sharon Hambrick had her first novel entitled Arby Jenkins published through BJU Press Books for Young Readers.

'93 grad Maxwell Roger Young was awarded the J.P. Strom Award for highest academic achievement at the Criminal Justice Academy in Columbia, South Carolina.

Jessica Horton, BJA senior, placed first in the piano chamber music program at the Interlochen Arts Camp to become the official pianist for the World Youth Orchestra. Jessica performed on the same program as pianist Andre Watts and also received the Howard Hanson Musicianship Award to attend the 1997 season of Interlochen.

Did You Know: Non-alumni of BJU can become an Alumni Association Subscriber for $10. The membership includes a subscription to the "Voice of the Alumni" and attendance at alumni social functions. Those interested should contact the BJU Alumni Association at (864) 242-5100, Ext. 3152 or alumni@bju.edu.

'96 grad Glenn Donnelly was awarded an Air Force Scholarship to Midwestern University's Chicago College of Osteopathic Medicine.

Is There Life After Homework?

August 24–26
Back To School

Thousand of students flooded the campus to start the 1996–97 school year at BJU. 1997 marks the University's 50th year in Greenville and 70th anniversary of its founding in College Point, FL. Entrances to the campus welcomed students with banners reading "Grateful to be in Greenville."

August 29–31
Society Rush

Returning students manned their society booths and threw parties to woo over 1,200 freshmen with food and gifts. Society rush makes incoming freshmen the most wanted students on campus. Saturday closed rush with fifty-three society induction parties.

September 7
Stratton Hall Dedication

Long-time BJU stage manager Mel Stratton, "the gentle giant who always made others look good," was honored for his consistency in his testimony and prayer life in the dedication of the renovated Concert Center, now known as Stratton Hall. Members of the speech faculty read various testimonies from those whom Mr. Stratton influenced on his many years of service with the stage crew.

Accounting professor Dr. Richard Stratton recently had articles published in two separate professional accounting journals, Accounting Educator's Journal and Accounting Perspectives.

'96 grad Brian Greutman was awarded a $10,000 scholarship to the College-Conservatory of Music at the University of Cincinnati as a graduate piano performance major.

'96 doctoral recipient Warren F. Hartz III was honored at South Carolina's 1996 Tech Prep Convention for his contribution to the state-wide institution of the Tech Prep/School-to-Work Transition as the standard for all teacher training institutions in South Carolina. The honor was partially the result of his doctoral dissertation.

Joyce Parks, BJU speech faculty member and senior member of the American Institute of Parliamentarians, was awarded the William Randolph Hearst National Parliamentary Education Project Award for her thirty years of teaching Parliamentary Procedure at BJU and for her commitment to encourage such teaching in U.S. schools.

Dr. Susan Quindag, BJU music education faculty member, spoke at the International Society of Music Education Conference in Amsterdam, Holland this past July. She presented a research paper concerning the use of audio-visual aids in instrument evaluation to over 2,000 attendees.

What can you do with a speech communication degree? Many parents have asked that question of their college-bound kids, so we've supplied a few of the possible answers. Getting the fundamentals in good speech skills can give you the freedom to choose from several fascinating careers.

Verna Lynch Folz, '76 grad
Fort Mill, SC
B.A. Interpretative Speech
Consultant and Seminar Speaker

Looking back over her career, 41-year-old Verna Folz describes her business as an "evolution." From college teacher to campaign director to seminar speaker to business owner, Verna has moved along with the communication trends and adapted a business in 1988 to help companies change.

"I own a business called Cornerstone Communications and 50 percent of a business with Education Design Group. Both businesses specialize in helping companies develop a team-based culture. First, we work with management, helping them develop a long-term strategy for building teams; then we create the detailed transition plan to accomplish the strategy. We then do the follow-up training required in all levels of the organization to put the plan to work." That's where Verna and her six-person staff come in. Some of her clients include Westinghouse, Sara Lee Bakeries, and the Environmental Protection Agency.

With clients from coast to coast, she usually has to travel three to four days a week. Eventually she hopes to train more people in her company to conduct seminars so she can focus on client service. Verna and her husband Gordon have two children, Katie (14) and Jacob (12).

M OF SPEECH

Steve Eager, '86 grad
Greenville, SC
B.A. Piano
M.A. Speech and Piano
Biographical Theatre

Beethoven, a.k.a. Steve Eager

When Steve graduated with a piano degree, he had no idea what to do next. So he decided to get a master's degree combining speech and piano. Then he had acting and music skills but was still unsure about how to use them to make a living. His graduate project was a one-man production in which he portrayed Beethoven and also played Beethoven's music. It was such a success that he began to wonder about using it as a springboard into his career.

"My show combines different themes from Beethoven's life into an 80-minute production. I wanted to give it the feel of a film, so there's a lot of background music. I'm in costume, and I take Beethoven from 15 years old when he meets Mozart all the way to his last concert when he's 50."

Steve has performed in schools and colleges in several states. He usually sends the script ahead to a school, and two students are picked to play characters in the performance. When he arrives, they join him in the recital, and afterwards he gives workshops on acting, piano, or Beethoven.

Now, at age 32, Steve is working on a sacred presentation based on the Holy War by John Bunyan and another music production on Liszt. He married Betsy Gresham in May '96 and says eventually he hopes to quit his supplemental job at the Hyatt Regency and perform full-time.

Take one look at 39-year-old Duane's teaching schedule at Alamance Christian School and you see a man who has thrown himself into his work with a passion. He teaches freshman speech, a drama elective, 8th grade literature and Bible, sophomore literature, senior journalism (yearbook), high school vocal music (mixed ensembles and choir), puts together a full three-act play every spring, participates in the state fine arts festival, is the speech chairman of the North Carolina Christian Activities Association, and directs the congregational singing at his church. How does he handle it?

"The most difficult part is just trying to make sure I'm on top of everything. I can handle one thing at a time, but when several things hit, like a yearbook deadline, plus getting speeches and vocal music ready for fine arts, plus the daily lesson plans, it gets hard."

Through the speech department, Duane has produced and directed plays such as "The Diary of Anne Frank," "The Miracle Worker," and "Arsenic and Old Lace." "The most rewarding part of my job is seeing kids do things they didn't think they could do and have the confidence to perform something well. I've had several kids go on to major in speech at college. It's humbling and exciting to know I've had the privilege of encouraging that."

Duane Manning,

Jennifer Stevens Koenig,
'87 grad
Lithonia, GA
B.A.Speech Education
M.A. Dramatic Production
Readers Theater group

A few years ago, BJ grads Andrew and Miriam Leuthold and Myron Beasley asked Jennifer to join the drama group they were forming, and so was born the Atlanta Readers Theater Guild. Readers theater, unlike conventional theater, "is more direct delivery, like a reading or a telling of a story," Jennifer explains. "Within one piece, I could play three or four different characters."

"We've mostly taken a compilation of writings from different genres and adapted them for readers theater. Our most popular program was last year's Christmas program, and we're working on a similar project for this Christmas."

Jennifer has also been the drama coordinator at her church for five years. "We do at least one drama every month—short sketches that go along with the theme of the message." She and her husband Dan have two boys, Brady (3) and Kaegan (2).

Steve Terelmes, '93 grad
Lancaster, PA
B.A. Interpretative Speech
Actor in Christian Theater

Steve and a furry friend from "Noah"

Jennifer (r.) and some of her merry band of readers.

When I first started working for Sight and Sound last year," says 25-year-old Steve Terelmes, "I was in awe. Their whole philosophy is to show the Gospel of Jesus Christ through the spectacle of sight and sound. And for them, the sky is the limit. Everything is larger than life. They have massive sets weighing over 12 tons. They have their own barn in the back because they use live animals in most of their shows. In "Noah" they used a total of 300 real and animated animals. They perform in a 1,400 seat auditorium, have a paid crew/cast of 200, and use over 1,400 lights. As soon as they do something, they start working on a way to do it bigger and better next time."

After college, Steve did non-professional acting for a while. He began to get frustrated by the lack of options open to Christian actors. After working at Sight and Sound, he realized the problem. "I would say that theater can be used for good or for evil. Contemporary theater has become so corrupted by Satan, but I think Christians can use it as an excellent medium for the Gospel."

In Sight and Sound's last production, "Noah," Steve played the role of a man in the evil ruler's entourage. He performed 12 shows a week and did "Noah" over 300 times. Steve is currently working on Sight and Sound's newest production, "The Miracle of Christmas," opening this month.

"Working here, I began to realize how much of a responsibility I have, even though I don't have much of a part. I minister to 1,400 people a show. In one Saturday, I minister to almost 5,000 people, which is more than most pastors see in a month. It's overwhelming! It's also been a blessing to work with Christian people."

Me? Give A Speech??

I'd rather have gum surgery!

In a recent survey, people rated public speaking as a greater fear than death (or visiting the dentist, for that matter). Frantic freshmen finding themselves in a university setting come up with all sorts of excuses to avoid Freshman Speech. But is it really all that bad? Of course not.

At BJU, speech classes are divided into small groups of about ten people – ten people who are just as nervous as you. The teacher will show you exactly what to do and teach you how to overcome your nervousness. So, relax. A lot of students actually have fun in the class!

Q&A

Freshman Speech: Been there; done that; no big deal.

Q. What was your attitude toward speech before you took Freshman Speech?

Kevin: Very nervous; in fact, I skipped it my freshman year. I had to take it first semester of my sophomore year.

Shannon: I was curious more than anything.

Katie: I always enjoyed speech in high school, but I was afraid that when I became the little fish in the big pond at BJU I would flounder and look stupid.

Greg: I thought it would be no big deal. I had speech in high school.

Anne: I couldn't sleep a wink the night before my first speech class. I was painfully terrified of taking the class.

Q. How nervous were you before you gave a speech?

Kevin: My heart rate would increase, and I would have trouble breathing deeply.

Shannon: I would get slightly nervous right before I was to speak.

Katie: About five minutes before class, I became very nervous. I was afraid that I wasn't very organized or that I wouldn't remember any details.

Greg: Very nervous. I always get nervous to some degree when I'm in front of others.

Anne: I was physically ill – I couldn't contain my breakfast! I practiced to the point my roommates knew the speeches better than I did.

Q. What did you do to help yourself overcome nervousness?

Kevin: Positive encouragement by friends and prayer.

Shannon: It was easier as I developed the speech, thinking more of what I was saying than of the eyes staring at me.

Katie: I think the key for me was preparation. If I had done my best to prepare, I felt God would give me the clarity of thought and would calm my nerves.
Greg: The more I was prepared, the less nervous I was before and during the speech.
Anne: Not focusing on myself, but rather on the message of the speech itself. People never knew I was nervous unless I acted nervous.

Q. Did your attitude toward speech change after you took the class? How?
Kevin: Yes. I realized that what I had to say was worth saying to others as long as I had done my best to research it.
Shannon: Yes. I became more confident, more at ease when speaking in front of people.
Katie: I really enjoyed my freshman speech class, so my attitude about the class improved. The smallness of the class made it an enjoyable experience for me.
Greg: Not really.
Anne: Yes. I changed my major to speech. I've been teaching speech for six years, and I love it!

What you have to look forward to:

There are five different types of speeches every freshman speech student will have to give:

Type	Example
Personal Experience:	The day I played my trumpet for the President.
Informative:	The history of trumpet playing.
Demonstration:	I will now show you how to play a trumpet.
Persuasion:	I think trumpets are better than flutes because . . .
Devotional:	Psalm 15: Praise the Lord with the trumpet.
Memorized prose:	"And the trumpets rang and the angels sang . . ."

More Stuff

Dr. Lonnie Polson of the BJU speech faculty did his doctoral dissertation on communication apprehension. Here are some helpful tips he gives to help you understand your nervousness and deal with it.

Causes of communication apprehension (in public speaking)
1. Fear of new situations – "I've never done anything like this before!"
2. Feelings of inadequacy – "Everyone in this room (especially the teacher) is a better speaker than I am!"
3. Feelings of conspicuousness – "Everyone is staring at ME!"
4. Feelings of dissimilarity – "I have nothing in common with these people!"
5. Fear based on prior history – "The last speech I gave was a bomb! Why should this one be any different?"

Dealing with apprehension
1. Prayer – "Casting all your care [anxiety] upon Him. . ."
2. Preparation – Nothing reduces apprehension better than thorough preparation (knowing your material).
3. Perspective – Maintain realistic expectations. Your speech doesn't have to be perfect to be effective.
4. Physical activity – Movement during speeches (gestures, use of visual aids, facial expressions) helps reduce tension.
5. Practice – Rehearse your speech out loud and try to simulate the actual speaking conditions you will face.

The President's Corner

This is the last day of our vacation. My wife and I have been hermits in the mountains of North Carolina. Spending this week in a little mountain cabin has given us an opportunity to get our hearts and heads right for another school year, which begins in about two weeks. We have imbibed deeply of the tranquillity and solitude that is to be enjoyed in the forest's embrace and in the cool mountain breezes. We would like to "build three tabernacles" and stay here, but the excitement and challenge of another school year beckons us to Greenville.

Yesterday I celebrated my 57th year of life in a setting that afforded the luxury to meditate on the meaning of it all and to make certain vows to the Lord about whatever future He allows me on earth. He has reminded me here of the privileges belonging to all of us in the household of faith and of the responsibilities. He really has "given us richly all things to enjoy." It is impossible for me to imagine how any life could be more fulfilling, more rewarding and satisfying than mine has been. He has given me a rich heritage of faith; a wife and children who love and honor Christ to share love, life, and happiness with; and the ever-invigorating challenge of ministering annually to some 5,000 students who matriculate at BJU.

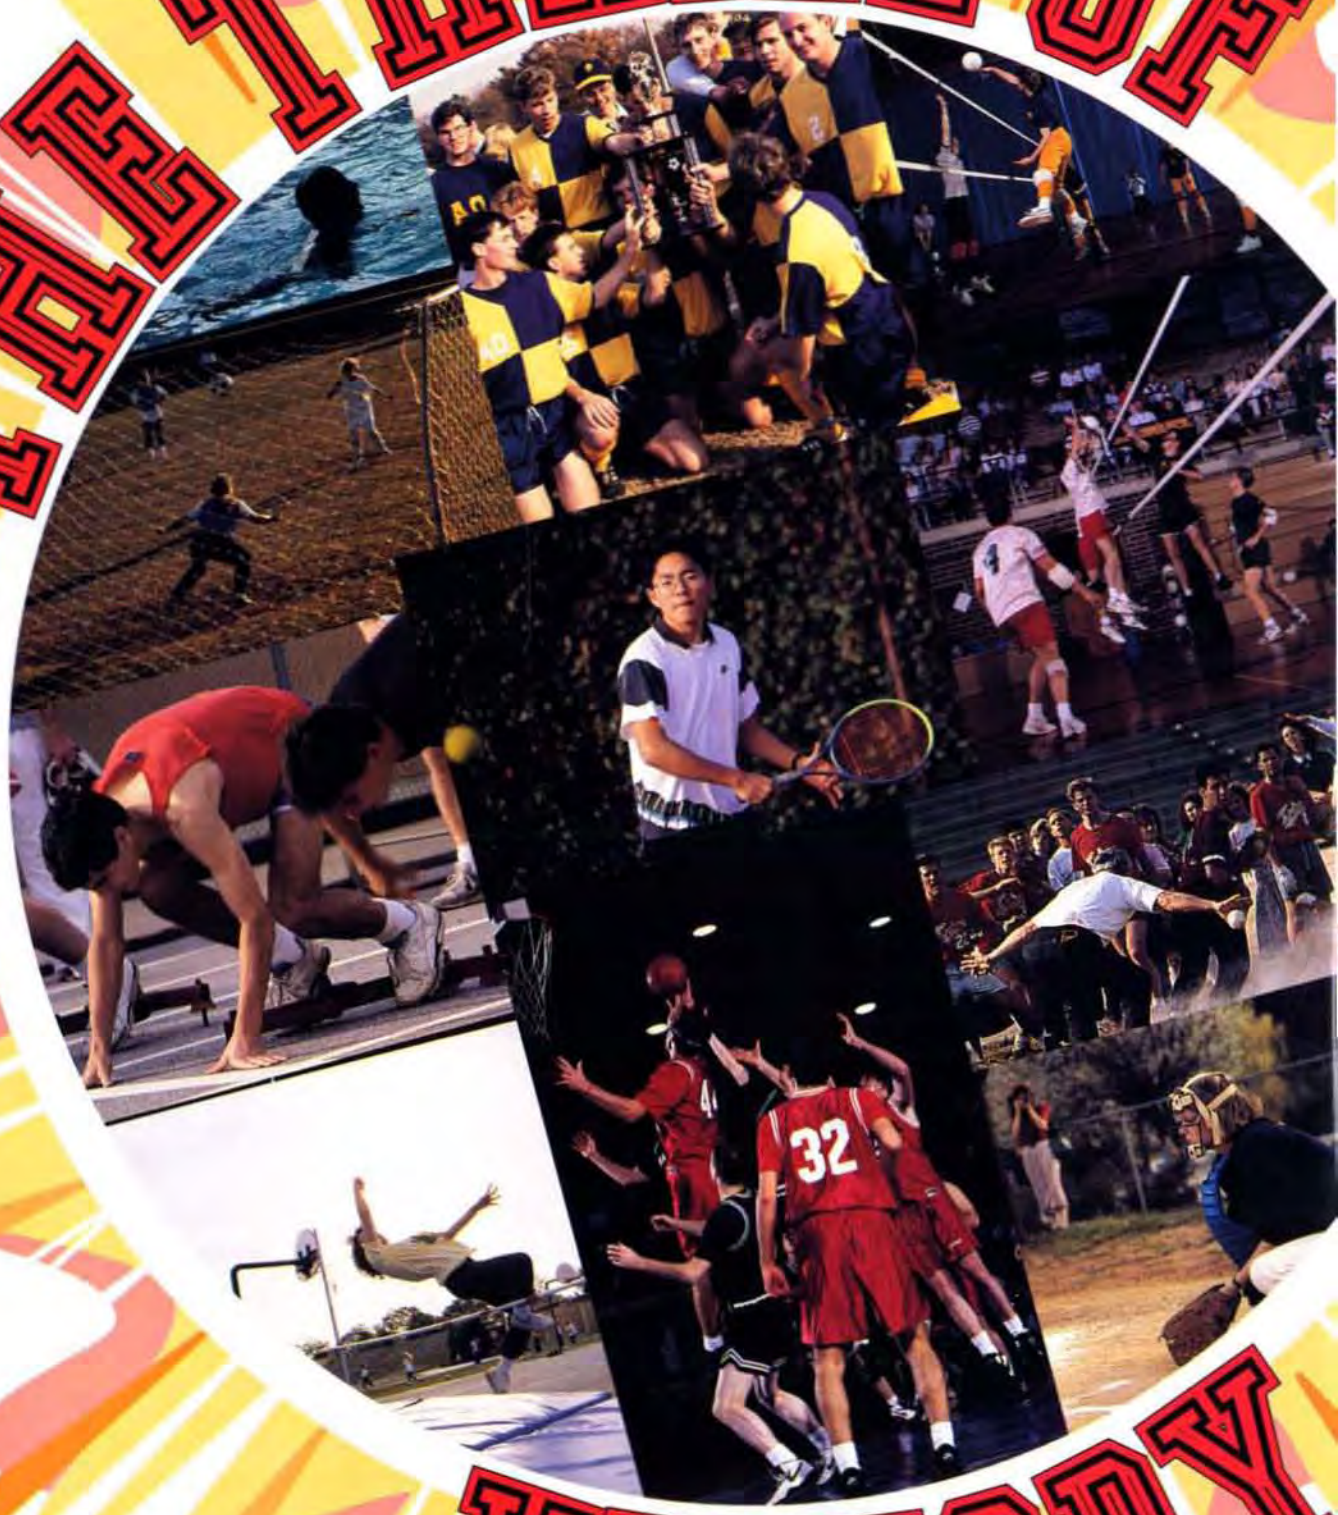
The four or five times we turned on the television set this week were to watch the evening news. You remember, don't you, the story of the small piece of meteorite that brought such giddy ecstasy to the scientists and the media? This rock makes them think that there might have been extraterrestrial life somewhere in the distant past. Their speculations about this are just as humorous and childish as their evolutionary theories about the origins of life here on earth. This rock might be several hundred billion years old. It might be a piece of Mars that might have been exploded off into space as the result of a large meteor slamming into Mars. They might have discovered a microbe that might have been life. The entire scientific world, like that rock, has been blown off into a spacey journey of might haves and might bes; but ever since Darwin's mythical suppositions about the origin of life on earth, that is pretty much where unbelieving scientists have lived. It is their own little world of faith, which they dishonestly call science.

Aren't you glad God has raised up Bob Jones University to educate your children and grandchildren in the eternally fixed and unchanging Truth of God? Here the education process separates fact from fiction, reality from myth, true science from pseudoscience, and a life bringing eternal reward from one bringing eternal ruin.

I'm so thankful to God that He has allowed me to live my life among the stalwarts of faith who are my colleagues here in that pursuit.

With the Psalmist I can say that my lines have fallen unto me in pleasant places. If the Lord allows me more years of life, I look forward to investing them in the education of your children in this "pleasant place." ■

THE THRILL OF VICTORY



A Sports Major?

Well, not exactly, but students in the new Health, Fitness & Recreation major and the Physical Education major get broad experience from the sports program at BJU, from playing and coaching to refereeing and training. BJU's well-equipped Fremont Fitness Center also provides a good training ground for these two sports-oriented majors.

...you'll get dozens of chances a year to experience it in BJU's intramural sports program.

Other colleges have based their programs on BJU's model, and even coaches of nationally ranked NCAA teams have commented on how well-run BJU's program is. With over two dozen men's and two dozen women's teams, your chances of getting real playing time are hundreds of times higher than trying to make an intercollegiate team. Play ball!

Not just basketball

It's not quite the Olympics, but BJU's program includes dozens of different major and minor sports for both men and women, including:

- Soccer
- Basketball
- Volleyball
- Softball
- Track
- Field
- Tennis
- Cross Country
- Badminton
- Swimming
- Water Polo (women only)
- Shuffleboard
- Table Tennis

The hard facts:

4,000 seat Alumni Stadium
3,000 seat gymnasium
10 lighted tennis courts
9 softball fields
8 lighted outdoor basketball goals
4 indoor racquetball courts
3 soccer fields
2 sand volleyball courts
2 exercise rooms
Indoor pool

Will Work for School

Can't afford college? This might change your mind...

Name: Jessica Givens
Major: Nursing
Job: Barge Memorial Hospital

I have two different jobs at Barge. I'm a nurse's aid, which means I change the bedding, take temperatures, deliver water—basically anything that the nurses don't have time to do. I'm also the ward secretary. I answer all the incoming calls after 5 p.m. I would like to work with geriatric patients eventually, and this job has helped me become more familiar with the terminology and equipment of the medical field.

Name: Stephanie Rider
Major: Elementary Education
Job: Child Development Center

"I play with the children, sings songs with them, read them stories, serve them their snack, put them down for a nap and clean up after them. I have learned more about children's behavior, intellect, abilities and how to make them interested in activities. Lord willing, after college I hope to teach children in a Christian school."

Name: Jeremy Windle
Major: Criminal Justice
Job: Public Safety

"I am the nightwatch supervisor for the Department of Public Safety. I supervise the training of all new nightwatch officers, make up the weekly schedule, take care of any problems that may arise, check up on paperwork, and make up the schedule that the shift officers use to lock and unlock campus buildings. Much of the training I receive here can also be applied to police work. This job teaches me how to interact with people as an officer and how to serve the community as well as develop my leadership skills. All these skills I can take with me to my future career in law enforcement."

The majority of students at BJU can't really afford a Christian college education either. But these five students are using that to their advantage. With some careful planning, you can get a campus job appropriate to your degree through BJU's Student Work Program. That way, while you're working your way through college, you'll also have something impressive to put on your resume.

Name: Cody Simon
Major: Culinary Arts
Job: Dining Common

"During a normal day, I arrive at the Dining Common at 4 a.m. and make breakfast. Then I make bread for lunch and dinner and the dessert for the following day. Eventually I would like to work in an uptown restaurant, and this work program job has really helped me prepare. I have learned to deal with people and deadlines; I have been able to watch and learn other people's techniques and decide if I can use them in my work; I have also been able to put into practice what I have learned in the classroom."

Name: Carl Franseen
Major: Professional Accounting
Job: Business Office

"Working in the Business Office has really taught me a lot about personnel management and has given me a taste of accounting. I work behind the counter, cashing checks, handling student bills, and posting and keeping track of the loans. I've really enjoyed learning from my co-workers and have been able to network with people who can help me find a job after graduation. I hope to work in an accounting firm for two years and then start my own business."

Name: Christina Crute
Major: Publishing
Job: BJU Press

"As an archiver for the BJU Press Composition Department, I gather all the files for a project that has been completed and write the information to a CD–ROM. I'm interested in writing children's lessons for child evangelism and in textbook writing. Working with editors, artists, designers, and authors has helped me understand the process involved in publishing."

College Financing Tips

Are the increasing national debt and exploding college tuition rates giving you headaches when you think of what a good education will cost when your child finally enters college? By the time a six year old enters college at BJU, you could be shelling out over $17,600 for one year of tuition. Compare that to the current rate of $8,880, and you'll see that's double the cost.

Tuition rates usually increase five to ten percent each year. By the year 2000, that could mean an increase of over 60 percent for just one year of college. It's no wonder the cost of a college education is one of the fastest growing expenses facing today's families!

Now, what if you could pay for your child's tuition in advance? BJU's Turn-of-the-Century Club offers parents and grandparents a chance to pay for tuition at the current rate.

If your son, daughter, or grandchild will be entering college between the years of 2000 and 2008, the Club allows you to pay for one, two, three, or all four years of their education in lump-sum, semi-annual, quarterly, or monthly payments at today's rates.

This offer isn't limited to one child per family. If you have more than one eligible child, you can pay for their membership as well.

And there is absolutely no risk! If, for any reason, your child or grandchild is unable to attend BJU, every penny of your investment will be refunded. So, there's nothing to lose, except time, if you wait.

Join the Turn-of-the-Century Club today and give junior the best gift of all…a promising future.
